Rossall School was founded in 1844 to serve the clergy families of the new industrial parishes which had grown up around Manchester.

By 1870 Rossall had achieved a considerable academic reputation which it has preserved over the years since. Its pupils have come from not only all over the British Isles but also in significant numbers from overseas.

A steadily expanding industrial scene in the UK and the demands and challenges of a vibrant Empire ensured a continuing demand for places.

Old Rossallians grew in stature serving in every field of endeavour. From Church, Government and Education at home and abroad to commercial and industrial entrepreneurship, past pupils contributed to the well-being of the Nation and society worldwide.

Despite ups and downs in the National economy, Rossall has literally weathered all storms. In recent years globalization has changed the nature of the School's intake with pupils coming from as far a field as Canada, China and Germany augmenting the Service and ex-patriate children of today.

Rossallians now go to universities around the world and the School has again put itself in the forefront of Education by committing its curriculum, in part, to the International Baccalaureate to meet this need.

Rossall needs, as in former years, financial support to fulfil its commitment to the boys and girls of today and tomorrow.
